

Interview with Lucas Martins

A school reporter interviewed professional surfer Lucas Martins about his life and work.

Experience

I'm from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, but I'm living in California, USA, because some of the best surfing coaches work here. I learned to surf when I was eight years old. My uncle taught me, and he encouraged me to enter competitions. Because I travel a lot, I've learned English and Spanish. Spanish is easier for me than English.

Lifestyle and Tastes

I wake up at 6 a.m. every day and spend four or five hours surfing. I eat healthy food and drink lots of water. In the evenings, I usually relax at home. I enjoy reading magazines and listening to music. Sometimes I meet friends at a café.

Places

California is an amazing place to train, and I'm going to stay here until next year. Another place I love is Lisbon, Portugal. The beaches are beautiful and there is a lot to do. However, restaurants can be expensive.

Questions

1. Why is Lucas living in California?
2. Why has he learned English and Spanish?
3. How does Lucas eat?
4. What does Lucas do in the evenings? Mention two activities.
5. Where is he going to stay until next year?
6. What is the negative aspect of Lisbon?
7. Who taught Lucas to surf?

Interview with Carlos Vega

A radio host spoke with Carlos Vega, who owns a small bakery in Mexico City.

Background

I never planned to become a baker. When I was eighteen, I studied engineering at university. However, my aunt owned a bakery and I often helped her during weekends. After several years, I realized that I enjoyed baking more than engineering. Ten years ago, I opened my own bakery.

Business and Lifestyle

Running a bakery is demanding. I usually arrive at work before sunrise because the bread must be ready early. My customers especially like traditional recipes that have been in my family for generations. Although I work long hours, I still find time to play soccer every Saturday and spend time with my children.

Looking Ahead

Recently, I have started selling products online, which has helped the business grow. In the future, I hope to open a second bakery in another city. I would also like to learn more about French pastries.

Questions

1. What did Carlos study at university?
2. Who influenced him to become a baker?
3. Why does he arrive at work before sunrise?
4. What kind of recipes do his customers like?
5. What does Carlos do on Saturdays?
6. How has selling products online helped his business?
7. What does he hope to do in the future?
8. What would he like to learn?

Interview with Sophie Bennett

A magazine interviewed Sophie Bennett, who works as a documentary filmmaker.

Career

My interest in filmmaking began unexpectedly. When I was fifteen, a teacher asked me to help record a school event. I discovered that I loved telling stories through video. Later, I studied media production at university and worked for several television companies before becoming an independent filmmaker.

During the last eight years, I have traveled to more than thirty countries to create documentaries about environmental issues. One of the most challenging projects involved spending three months in the Arctic, where temperatures often dropped below -20°C.

Work and Personal Life

A documentary project can take months or even years to complete. Before filming, I spend a lot of time researching and interviewing experts. The most rewarding part of my job is meeting people from different cultures and learning about their experiences.

When I am not working, I enjoy hiking, cooking, and practicing photography. These hobbies often inspire ideas for future projects.

Future Plans

At the moment, I am working on a documentary about renewable energy. After that, I am going to take a short break and spend time with my family. Eventually, I hope to create educational films for schools and universities.

Questions

1. How did Sophie become interested in filmmaking?
2. What did she study at university?
3. What did she do before becoming an independent filmmaker?
4. How many countries has she traveled to for her documentaries?
5. What was one of her most challenging projects?
6. What does Sophie do before filming begins?
7. What does she consider the most rewarding part of her job?
8. Which hobbies does she enjoy when she is not working?
9. What is she working on at the moment?
10. What is she going to do after finishing her current documentary?
11. What does she hope to create in the future?

Interview with Daniel Nakamura

A travel magazine interviewed wildlife photographer Daniel Nakamura about his career, experiences, and future ambitions.

Experience

I was born in Osaka, Japan, but for the last five years I have lived in Vancouver, Canada. I decided to move because it gave me easier access to forests, mountains, and wildlife. My interest in photography began when I was twelve years old and received a camera as a birthday gift from my grandfather. During university, I studied environmental science, but I continued developing my photography skills. Since my work has taken me to many different countries, I have learned English, French, and a little Portuguese. Although French was challenging at first, I can now use it confidently when I travel.

Lifestyle and Tastes

A typical working day begins early. If I am preparing for a trip, I spend several hours researching animals and locations. While traveling, I may wait quietly for hours to photograph a single animal. I try to maintain a healthy lifestyle by cooking my own meals whenever possible and exercising regularly. When I am not working, I enjoy hiking, reading biographies, and attending local cultural events.

Places

Vancouver remains one of my favorite cities because of its natural beauty and outdoor lifestyle. Next year, I am going to spend six months in New Zealand working on a photography project about endangered birds. Another place that impressed me was Cape Town, South Africa. I loved the scenery and the variety of wildlife, but transportation was sometimes difficult because many attractions were far apart.

Questions

1. Why did Daniel move to Vancouver?
2. When did his interest in photography begin?
3. Who gave him his first camera?
4. What did Daniel study at university?
5. Why has he learned several languages?
6. How does Daniel maintain a healthy lifestyle?
7. What three activities does he enjoy when he is not working?
8. What is he going to do next year?
9. What did Daniel like about Cape Town?
10. What difficulty did he experience in Cape Town?
11. How long has Daniel lived in Vancouver?
12. Which language was difficult for him at first?
